In view of the number of scorching hot days, it was also a surprise that it did not open with a rousing thunderstorm although with a rousing thunderstorm, although thunder and lightning did accompanit, but very mildly. The rain started in a sprinkle, gradually wetting down the powdered ground, so that when it began to rain harder it soaked in instead of running off. This soaked the ground to a depth of about a foot, reviving vegetation, and its effect will be noticed on sunbaked lawns. It rained from about 5.30 Saturday afternoon until about four o'clock Sunday morning. It was the first rainfall this mouth and when measured today will doubtless show considerable.
